Liberator

Motivated by a deep-seated belief in purposeful action, freedom, and equality, the Liberator challenges societal norms across various domains, be it corporate, political, social, or environmental.

Guided by a strong moral compass and a desire to uphold human integrity and autonomy, they actively advocate for change, campaigning to effect social, economic, or environmental reforms. Embracing the power of collective action, activists strive to dismantle structures of injustice while championing a vision for a better world.

Despite their active social lives, they are highly independent thinkers. Besides placing a high value on social justice and improvement, they are uncompromising and committed to the greater good. They are passionate about finding and exposing system flaws. Their perspective is influenced by the action that produces the reaction. It becomes imperative to maintain impartiality and fairness, as well as to distinguish between facts and agendas. It is essential that they are unbiased, factual, discerning, and possess excellent speaking, research, and planning skills.

They communicate as activists, gurus, and motivators.

Their approach can be assertive or confrontational, Liberators wield their influence to drive forward social causes, deriving fulfillment from the impact they have on society. They typically have exceptional speaking, research, and planning skills, and communicate with the conviction of activists, the wisdom of gurus, and the passion of motivators. A potent combination of a strong Jupiter, Venus, and Rahu positioned in the Dharmic houses (1, 5, and 9), as reflected in the D1 and D9 charts, can signify a Liberator profile.
